Brock Settles Lawsuit With Nexxfield – Original NexxPad No Longer Available in the United States or Canada

Brock USA, LLC has reached a settlement with NexxField, Inc. in Brock's lawsuit alleging that the Original NexxPad product infringes six Brock USA patents.

Brock USA, LLC and Nexxfield, Inc. settled their lawsuit that was pending in the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois in which Brock asserted that Nexxfield's Original NexxPAD product infringes six U.S. Patents on Brock's PowerBase® and PowerBase YSR® products (Case No. 1:16-cv-07135 (N.D. Ill.)). The Original NexxPAD that is the subject of the settlement is shown below:

Under the terms of the settlement:

- Nexxfield will no longer make, have made, use, market, advertise, promote, sell, provide or install the Original NexxPad in the United States and Canada, or import the Original NexxPad into the United States, during the term of the Brock patents; and
- Nexxfield will no longer assist any third party to make, have made, use, market, advertise, promote, sell, provide or install the Original NexxPAD in the United States and Canada, or import the Original NexxPad into the United States, during the term of the Brock Patent Rights.

All other terms and conditions of the settlement are confidential.

"We are pleased that we were able to resolve our patent dispute with Nexxfield," says Dan Sawyer, Brock USA's CEO. "We wish Nexxfield well, and we encourage fair competition in the marketplace. Brock will continue to enforce its patent rights to protect its innovations."

About Brock USA:

Brock USA is the leader in performance shock pad systems for artificial turf fields. With over 50 million square feet of Brock systems in play underneath athletic fields worldwide, the company engineers the best, safest and most sustainable playing surfaces in the world for athletes at all levels. Brock is an Official Education Partner of The Concussion Legacy Foundation, a Boston-based non-profit organization founded to advance the study, treatment, and prevention of brain trauma in athletes and other at-risk groups. In October 2011, Brock became the first company in the industry to have a Cradle-to-Cradle Certification CM for its combined drainage and shock pad product.
